

Global Leader in Food Cutting Technology

Since 1910, Urschel has been designing and manufacturing food cutting machinery. Urschel's worldwide reputation for excellence has developed by working in partnership with food processors over the years to meet the ever-changing challenges in the marketplace. More than simply a builder of food processing machinery, Urschel works with food processors to develop solutions to processing problems by implementing—or inventing—the best Urschel machine to fit any production situation.

Each Urschel machine ordered is constructed individually with meticulous care and pride without the use of assembly lines. Every part is designed and manufactured for use under extreme production demands. The majority of all parts on every Urschel cutting machine are manufactured at the Urschel plant. Excellence in manufacturing includes two on-site, state-of-the-art foundries. Parts are constantly monitored and inspected throughout the manufacturing process for maximum quality control.

Urschel has Product Test Cutting Facilities located worldwide ready to work with you on high speed cutting applications. Customers are encouraged to be present during tests to discuss any questions with qualified technicians fully trained on Urschel equipment. No-charge, no-obligation tests are documented and compiled in a comprehensive report. The company headquarters, including the U.S. test cutting facility, is centrally located just one hour outside of Chicago.
